Internet access

Throughout the year, many projects and assignments will require the use of the Internet and/or computers in general. Some teachers give daily homework reminders and project guidelines (with links to helpful sites) to students in their classes.

If you do not have a computer with Internet access at home, there are many computers on campus that are available for students to use. The computer lab is open daily (except during some class periods) and after school from 4:00 - 5:00. On weekends and evenings, access is available at the Mathis Public Library. Students who have Internet access at home will definitely use it for various projects assigned by their teachers throughout the year.
